

Questions The New You Must Consider:

What does the The New You – “A Daily Development Plan” implies to you? Express it using as many words as possible.

What are the steps you have taken in the past for improving or building yourself? Explain the steps in your own words if possible think hard to reveal your overall process.

What do you want (descriptive) and believe (prescriptive) The New You will look like? Be very descriptive by describing what you want as The New You. If you are prescriptive understand you must real standards or rules for your life.

What type of structure (person, individual, temple, etc.) you would like yourself to be? And why? As an example, a flourishing orchard or a well oiled machine or an amazing oak tree.

What are the things you believe must be cleared out before you can begin constructing The New You? List and explain.

What will become the foundation & footings for constructing The New You upon? Express them based on your standards or beliefs or principles from your faith or what you place your faith in.

Who are the authority (instructors) and accountability (proposers) figures you currently have in your life? List their names and define your expectations of them and the roles they perform.

Who are the family, friends, parishioners, colleagues, etc. you believe will become apart of The New You? What expectations and roles will each of them play in your life going forward? Make sure you have both authority and accountability figures clearly defined going forward.

Are you a person of compliance? If so explain areas of you life you are in compliance and if not in compliance explain why.

All of the answers to these questions are designed to become information used in the daily development plan. Some will become items to be discarded or items for incorporating, as you go about the process of developing The New You add more questions to this list. You will only increase your effectiveness in this personal undertaking.

This assignment is to be shared with the architect and builder of The New You. Understand the Lord is both the architect and the builder. Many people have tried to reinvent themselves and have failed miserably. This can be seen as a personal makeover, but it will not be, nor will it be a renovation. You are going for an entirely different person this time. Parts of your life that are useful for building The New You must be vetted subjectively and objectively; personally and corporately (other people your in relationship with). Parts of your life will become salvaged, however, they might be repurposed under compliance protocols and procedures.

Diligent work will be required on a daily basis. Remember, this is a daily development plan. It will demand commitment on your part. This is not for a grade, nor is it for impressing others. It is for The New You There are many different kinds of ways to develop. However, this daily development plan is designed to build you spiritually and naturally for the purpose of affecting every area of your life. There will be internal and external developments in your life. Your profession, vocation and/or hobby will become very rewarding, along with clearly seeing your hobbies and interests in more relaxing ways. Your standard of living will drastically be challenged and even changed. You will become prosperous in areas you have yet to realize prosperity. Moreover, as said, diligent work will be required. Maximizing your value will be a stated goal and every objective will target maximizing your value to God and to others as your main goal.